Continuation of 5. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Applicant defines in the remarks that "the screw is rotatably supported relative to the housing". After the interview on June 26, 2003, the examiner discused the claims with his primary. It was concuded that applicant does not positively recite in the claims that the screw rotates to apply the brakes. "Rotatably supported" is a broad term which can read on a number of different parts of the Kingston referece. Further, applicant throughout the claim uses alternative language, thus further expanding the scope of the claim. Because of the alternative language the claim was read broadly and the Kingston reference was applied.
